

Basketball Coaching Project – Port Elizabeth, South Africa

Project Overview

Basketball in South Africa is bursting with untapped potential. While it hasn't received the same investment as rugby, cricket, or football, there is a huge pool of talented and passionate young players in the townships of Port Elizabeth just waiting for the chance to play in a structured environment. This volunteer basketball placement gives you the opportunity to make that happen, running training clinics, organising matches, and building a regular league system for players aged 8 to 16. You'll work with informal street leagues and township teams, introducing the fundamentals of dribbling, passing, shooting, and team play, while also helping to build confidence, discipline, and friendships both on and off the court. The focus isn't on creating Africa's next international star, it's on giving young players the chance to enjoy basketball, develop their skills, and feel part of a team. Supported by our in-country staff, you'll also have the chance to plan tournaments, run workshops in local schools, and even join other sports sessions to make the most of your placement. This is your chance to leave a lasting impact on South African basketball while having an unforgettable experience.
