

Rugby Coaching Project – Port Elizabeth, South Africa

Project Overview

South Africans are extremely passionate about Rugby and are renowned for being a very tough and technical force on the international stage, yet many of the country's most talented young players grow up in townships where access to structured coaching and facilities is extremely limited. Despite this, the passion for the game is impossible to contain, with children playing improvised matches in the streets and dreaming of one day wearing the Springbok jersey. This rugby volunteer placement allows you to help turn that passion into opportunity by working with children from disadvantaged communities around Port Elizabeth, delivering organised training sessions and matches in schools and townships. Supported by experienced in-country staff, you'll introduce the fundamentals of rugby in a fun, inclusive environment, build strong relationships through a shared love of the game, and help young players develop confidence, teamwork and skill. From complicated technical plays and beach runs to rucking and mauling formations, you will soon develop your own rugby coaching programme, unique to you and your rugby players. While the focus is on participation and enjoyment, you'll also help identify promising talent who could progress through local academies. making this an inspiring and deeply rewarding rugby experience with a lasting impact.
